

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION

This study is a sociolinguistics study about code mixing utterances document control division and other division in PT Panca Aditya Sejahtera. the writer is interested in investigatating code mixing because indonesian community is bilingual society that is why people who live in bilingual community have a tendency to use two codes or more when the communicate to each other in order to maintain and establish relationship with other people. in this research the writer tries to analyze code mixing in the utterances document control division and other division in PT Panca Aditya Sejahtera.

Considering the findings, the writer is able to make conclusion with her thesis. The writer found that the document control division usually results in code mixing. The main code of code mixing utterances in Indonesian. there are three types of code mixing utterances, Indonesian-Javanese, Indonesian-English, Indonesian-English-javanese.

Words that are used in Indonesian-Javanese as Gak (not), Wes (allright), the words used in the Indonesian-English as Oke (expressions for agreement), Outlook (the program to send messages such as email), schedule, forecast, ect. Phrase that is often used in conversation is a kind of type of documents at PT Panca Aditya Sejahtera as the Daily report, Quality plant, Job description, Organixation Stucture, ect.

Forms of code mixing which is often used in the form of conversation control document inserting word and inserting phrase. For code mixing, lack of knowledge is no excuse mixing effect in the building code. Reason is the lack of influence of the vocabulary in the language used. Some words used in conversations between document control division with other divisions in PT Panca Aditya Sejahtera is the name of the ISO document. Use of mixed code commonly used in conversations document control division with another division makes it easier to remember and understand its meaning because many of the relevant documents relating to the company.