CHAPTER V
CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1 Conclusion

Based on the analysis of Barrack Obama's speech at Farewell Address speech in Chicago 2017, the purpose of this speech is the persuader means to proof brought about the character or virtue of the speaker or reveal in his speech according to Robert Cockcroft and Susan M.Cockcroft (1992:21). The researcher has identified the use of lexical cohesion and relationship lexical cohesion to construct stance. In the level of lexical cohesion, as the result of this study, the researcher found that the highest frequently from lexical cohesion is reiteration from particular repetation. All types of lexical cohesion occur in the speech: repetition, synonym, superordinate, general words, hyponymy and antonym. In addition, there is only two type of collocation in the speech namely hyponym and antonym. Another lexical cohesive device is called Reiteration. There are four types of reiteration that can be found in the speech: repetition, synonym, superordinate and general words. However, there is no collocation meronym and same referent in the speech and the occurance of personality of stance, the highest frequently from reiteration, particular repetition in persuader and stance. In other hand, there is no stance in field persuader as a humorist. .

All of lexical devices in Barrack Obama's speech at Farewell Address speech in Chicago 2017 have different functions. In the field of lexical cohesion and construct stance, The researcher related with personality and stance for those speaker. The relationship between lexical cohesion and personality stance are the persuader making good persuasive to audience involved in the issue of the topic. The persuader having a good language and interaction to conveys the issue and topic. During the speech the researcher not found about a humor sense, it's occur because to conveys the target meaning. The persuader needs a big power and deeply persuasion to be successful or make a good.

5.2 Suggestion

The researcher hopes that this research can give achieve something as a source of information for other researchers who are interested in the discourse analysis studies especially in the area of cohesion related personality and stance. The result of the study hopefully can be used for the next researcher as an alternative reference and comparator that might be relevant to the future research.

It would give a new achieve to the theory of cohesion system and construct stance. It will be interesting to analyze the cohesion in other figures' speech instead of political figures, for example, analyzing the cohesion in the speech of inaugural speech, election speech, political campaign, and others.