

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION & SUGGESTION

This chapter consists of the conclusion and suggestion of the study. The researcher makes some conclusion and suggestion after analyzing the Crazy rich Asians novel.

5.1 Conclusion

Crazy Rich Asians is one of the best seller novels by Kevin Kwan. Through his novel, Kwan also wants to show the world that jet sets are also born from Asia like Singapore, China, and Hong Kong people who spread all over the world. There are many issues that can be raised such as racism or classism but here the researcher raises the issue of postcolonial identities.

In accordance with the theory, there are three points in postcolonial identity, namely mimicry, ambivalence, and hybridity. Through that post-colonial identities theory, it helps the researcher to analyze and understand the deeper meaning about the issue related to female characters in the novel. This issue is interesting because of its discussion happen during and after the colonial era that has occurred until now.

Based on the aim of the research is to examine how post-colonial affected the female character's identity. As portrayed in the characters Rachel and Peik Lin, both of them have the same background as descendants of China who live in America. The Western culture they receive influences their identity as Eastern including in communication, culture, lifestyle, language, habits, etc. Rachel's character is also affected by her best friend's identity, as during the afternoon tea she recommended Nyonya Kue, an Asian cake to Rachel and that cake makes Rachel like his distinctive taste. In another example, Peik Lin dressed Rachel in clothes from famous foreign designers so that her look does not look like old fashioned Chinese.

5.2 Suggestion

Based on the conclusion above, the researcher suggests to the next researchers in order to be able to write better research about the postcolonial issues that exist around us until now. The researcher realizes that this thesis still needs many corrections so, she also hopes that the reader could give correction and suggestion to this study. This research also suggests to remind us of our true identity so that, we could filter which culture is good or not for ourselves.
