Keywords: Sociolinguistics, Javanese, Wayang

This study is a sociolinguistic study. Holmes (2001:1) says that sociolinguistic is the study between language and society. It means that there must be different speaking because of different social contexts. Based on the definition above, language and society have close relationship. The language phenomena often occur in society, one of them is language varieties that usually occur in bilingual or multilingual society. This study focused on the language varieties of Javanese language that is used in Wayang wong's scenario entitled "Ranjapan Abimanyu" and whether there is a phenomenon of code mixing or code switching. The approach for this research is qualitative approach that identifies each sentence, and then classifies it, and the last is analyzes each sentence. This study does twice analyzing. First, analyzing Javanese language that uses the theory from Sasangka (2009:26) A Javanese sentence can be classified as ngoko, madya, or krama based on the lexicons on that sentence. Second analyzing is whether in this scenario the phenomenon of code switching or code mixing. The findings of this study are Javanese people nowadays only use two kinds of Javanese level language ngoko (ngoko lugu and ngoko alus), and krama (krama lugu and krama alus). This is shown from the dialog of wayang wong in its' scenario. In its' scenario can be found sentences ngoko (ngoko lugu and ngoko alus), krama (krama lugu and krama alus), and several words of Bahasa Kawi (old Javanese language). Code mixing cannot be found in the scenario but code switching still can be found.
